Do you regularly use data to review your programs or to communicate impact to donors, funders or the public? If you are looking to grow your skills in collecting, producing and analyzing data to benefit your organization, this workshop is for you!

During this day-long, hands-on workshop you will learn about and practice using new tools to help save you time and improve the accuracy of your next data project. In Data Bootcamp, presented by the Connecticut Data Collaborative, you will use your own laptop to manipulate data and learn how to:

- Use questions to decide what kind of analysis to conduct.
- Identify the types of data you have, and what you can do with each.
- Use Excel to conduct basic analyses and create simple charts to visualize your data.

Bring your own laptop with Excel installed in order to fully participate in this workshop.
